Bringing Pride in the Trades: A Case Study on Starting a High School Tiny House Program"

From initial planning to final punch, learn how to engage your ISD and partner with a high school to train the next generation of builders. In this session, Country Builders Association's award-winning building trades professionals and mentors will share how they're making this happen. The session will guide you through their grassroots, self-funded program that includes building, selling, and auctioning a fully finished custom home every school year. It will provide a clear path to creating or strengthening your own high school building trades program and giving students real-world experience.
